organic

As per Government's Development Programs, Agriculture is considered to be key sector to focus on and under state support. Kyrgyz Republic has very advantageous position for development of agriculture industry for its favorable climate, naturally cultivated agro products, and territorial advantage. The territory of Kyrgyz Republic is divided into oblasts that have distinct geographic and climate conditions that offers comparative advantages. For example, in Chuy oblast the dominant agricultural product is sugar beet; Issyk-Kul oblast is famous with apples and pears; in Batken oblast farmers grow apricot (dried); Osh and Jalal-Abad oblasts are the largest producers of cotton and walnut, Naryn oblast is famous for cattle farming; and Talas oblast is the biggest exporter of kidney and soya beans.

Agriculture consists of the production and processing of agricultural products. This gives this industry more value-added and labor-intensive characteristics. The intensity of labor can be maintained at the expense of the rural population, since the majority of the country's population lives in rural areas.

Stable demand for agricultural new products, which is a resource base for food industry

Access to the EAEU market with 180 million people

GSP+ status, with the possibility of export about 6000 products to the European Union

Processing of primary agricultural agricultural products using new technologies
